New Mexico National Guard's First Ever Lactation Room

KIRTLAND AIR FORCE BASE, N.M. – The 150th Special Operations Wing is scheduled to host the ribbon cutting of three new Mothers Rooms Jan. 11, 2020, at 1 p.m. here in building 1044.

The new lactation rooms provide essential support for our military mothers so they can continue breastfeeding while completing the mission. The ribbon cutting ceremony will be attended by the Air Force Special Operations Command Commander, Lieutenant General James Slife.

“Our wing has experienced a boom of babies in the last year, and we are proud to serve with many working mothers. In fact, women make up over 40% of our enlisted and officer leadership team,” said Col. Esther Sablan, the 150th Special Operations Wing Commander.
